Description
Several months ago I made the evolutionary jump from stroke to VICI in a systemd environment, and along the road to mastering the new setup, I had stumbled upon the fact that charon-systemd logging configuration is configured by charon-systemd.journal config keys. After having reviewed some of the strongSwan source code, it seems to me that Martin Willi's commits from 2014 for systemd integration (e2d9f27c in particular) missed a minor change to <code>configure.ac</code> to have this configuration file installed. Attached is a trivial patch which installs charon-systemd.opt as <code>/etc/strongswan.d/charon-systemd.conf</code> much like how configure.ac installs charon-logging.opt as <code>/etc/strongswan.d/charon-logging.conf</code>. I've reported this as Debug bug #866325.
