If that device uses Android < 5.0 then that's a known issue. It's not really a problem, though, it's just cosmetics. There is a fix, but I didn't release an update of the app yet (I don't really see a reason to update the app just for this).

The Amazon Fire TV Stick 4K uses Android 7.1. Do you need additional details or do you expect the fix you have will address this? Agreed it is cosmetic and can wait until the next release.

Is that based on Android TV? If so, then that's a different issue, one we can not really do much about at the moment as the app is not compatible to Android TV (needs a different UI and some APIs we use are stripped from Android TV for no good reason).
